

Evening Chat

Some Christmas Chatter

Holly wreaths have arrived and you'll have to watch your step, dear folks, for the old holly wreath ain't what she used to be. Santa Claus is sure going to have the laugh of his life when he sees the painted imitation berries which some of these wreaths are sport- ing. Also—they're selling small wreaths of this variety for 50 cents at some locations, and for 40 at others. Bunches of holly sell for a dollar.

Christmas trees are high priced this year—anywhere from a dollar for a tiny under-sized specimen to four dollars for the middle-sized tree. God knows what the full grown creature sells for. As for mistletoe—some of the girls are keeping a close lookout, so they can't get kissed by mistake; while others are keeping mighty close supervision over the stuff, for fear they will miss being kissed. I heard of a young lady today who declares she is going to carry a sprig of mistletoe everywhere she goes!

You can have the time of your life this week watching the crowds. Prowl around during the afternoon but not on shopping bent, for this week is no time to shop. Watch the faces. Hear the frenetic queries, the worried suggestions, the frantic "What'll I get—? Will this do for—? What're ya go- ing to buy—?"

I got John a handsome bath- robe," I heard a young wife remark to her friend. "It cost $25 and it had it charged to John. He won't mind. Won't it look like I thought of a bathrobe. I almost forgot he needed one." Wonder whether or not John will call it a lucky thing. The shops will remain open three nights, beginning Wednesday, and we're going to have one lovely jam. I'm going to be present to see the fun. The clerks might as well have me to contend with as anyone. Come, folks, don't miss the joy of one last scramble for presents of all varieties and color—Christmas comes but once a year.

School-Girl Nonsense

Did you ever hear a school-girl tell about a "spread" at boarding school which took place after the lights had been rung and the dormitory had settled into gloaming quiet? You've missed something if you have not. All day there is hushed planning, whenever chance offers. Then—along about 10 o'clock when it is gloriously dark, one by one soft footsteps may be heard as the girls who were invited to the party creep into a certain room and shuffle attacks of giggles. When all guests have appeared a faint light well hidden and protected, enables those in charge of the "spread" to find the wash-bowl tooth-brush holder, soapbox, nail files and other dining paraphernalia. Soon the wash bowl holds a goodly supply of "elegant" said. Butlers bring the olives to light. There is usually plenty of sandwiches, candy, cake and pickles. Interspersed with wild wit and choked sardonic wit. The guests are clad in bath- robes and bedroom slippers. Along about midnight the spooks walk, so no girl dares go back to her room. Instead, they are impressed by being placed anywhere and everywhere, are invented, three in each single bed, of which there are usually two in a room, two girls on the floor under one rug, two more in the closet under one's best dresses, others scattered promiscuously wherever snoozing is good. And next day there is much yawning in the classroom. I wish I were able to relate in true girl manner the many absorbing tales which come to my ears. Girls are fearfully interesting, rather shocking, but wholly human. As long as their fun is clean one enjoys to the utmost the many stories as to school life.

J. A. Connelly, of Littleton, Dies

J. A. Connelly, a well-known and highly respected resident of Littleton, died at his home there yesterday morning at the age of 74 years.

Mr. Connelly was one of the pioneer residents of that section and had done much to build up the municipality of Littleton. He was the first justice of the peace of that community and held that office for a period of 24 years. He had been president of the Littleton Bank ever since its organization in 1901.

He is survived by his wife and one son, B. F. Connelly, of Akron, Ohio, and one daughter, Mrs. B. J. Farrell, of Clarksburg, and by 17 grandchildren.

The funeral will be held from the Catholic Church at Littleton tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Get the Proofs for Lalley Superiority

"Getting right down to brass tacks" as the saying goes—Why is the LALLEY LIGHT superior?

That's what you want to know, have a right to know and should know. It's good business.

We are not going to attempt to explain in detail here the reasons for LALLEY superiority; we prefer to merely give you a few of the outstanding LALLEY features, then, ask you to come in and get the figures and the proofs.

The LALLEY LIGHT will furnish sufficient power, direct, without the aid of the battery, to save you 20% expense.

—It does not need a large, expensive battery.

—It is built for exactness and precision—to last and give dependable service for years.

—It runs as quietly and smoothly as a sewing machine.

—It is the simplest plant made, having only three moving parts.

—It can be assembled and disassembled with a wrench and a screw driver in a short time.

—It has been used by thousands of owners over a period of 10 years.

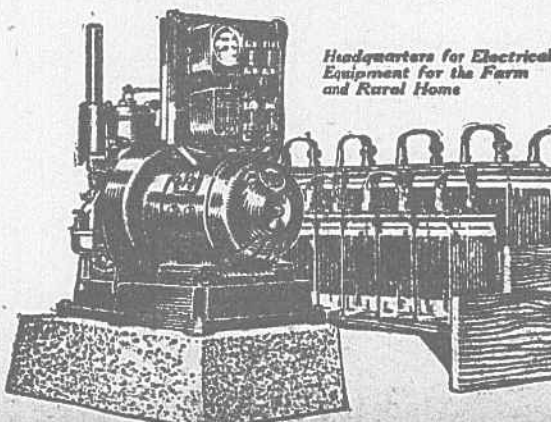

These are mere statements, of course, but they should arouse your interest sufficiently to come in and have us prove them.

That's what we are here for—to explain the LALLEY LIGHT and demonstrate its superiorities. Come in at your earliest convenience.

Be Sure—See the LALLEY First
